Lifeless!

The hoot of a morepork was far off. The moon shone brightly on the lifeless forest floor. Scuttling along the fallen leaves was a small brown kiwi; burrowing its beak in search of a midnight snack. The trees danced in the moon-lit night.

A small twig snapped off a Totara tree. On it was a speckled insect, barely visible to the naked eye. The wind whispered eerily into the insect's ear; "Beware, beware, the little brown kiwi is near" It's camouflaged body would keep it safe... but for how long?

The wind's eerie voice picked up; "Beware, beware, the little brown kiwi is here." The rays of playful rays of the sun peeked through the trees. "Oh cool. Look what I found" and just like that the stick insect was put in a glass jar.
